

Amy Rogers

Dr. Amy Rogers has been in the teaching profession for over 20 years. She earned her B.A. at Lycoming College, M.Ed. at Bloomsburg University, and Ph.D. at Penn State University, where she specialized in Curriculum and Instruction. Amy has experience as a secondary social studies teacher and literacy coach. She currently serves as Director of Teacher Education, Certification Officer, and Associate Professor at Lycoming College, where she teaches courses in curriculum and instruction, reading and writing in the content area, foundations in education, elementary social studies, digital storytelling and ELL instruction. Amy is serving her 2nd term as a Board of Director for the East Lycoming School District. Outside of work Amy enjoys travelling, spending time with family and friends, attending her children's athletic and extracurricular events, and horseback riding.