

Caroline Johns

Mrs. Caroline Johns currently serves as the assistant superintendent for teaching and learning for the Moon Area School District. She first joined the district's administrative staff as principal of Allard Elementary School in 2010. In addition to her duties as principal, she was later named the district's director of instruction. For a brief period in the fall of 2013, Mrs. Johns also served as interim superintendent during a leadership transition.

Prior to Moon, Mrs. Johns served as an assistant principal at Quaker Valley Middle School from 2007-2010. As a teacher, she taught regular and special education at the middle school level in Ohio.

A graduate of Ohio University, Mrs. Johns earned her bachelor's and master's degrees in education with a concentration in severe behavior handicaps. In addition, she received her principal certification from Cleveland State University. She is doctoral candidate at the University of Pittsburgh's School of Education.
