

Christina Wood

Christina Wood has worked in higher education for over 10 years and is currently the Sr. Student Services Coordinator for Temple University Harrisburg. She is a Harrisburg Area Community College graduate of the theatre arts program and also holds a bachelor's degree from Millersville University in English, and a master's degree from the University of Pennsylvania in higher education management.

Her past professional positions have included extensive experience in college admissions recruitment, community outreach, and student development and retention. Passionate about issues of post-secondary education access and advocacy for underrepresented populations, Christina currently serves as the Director of Public Advocacy for the Pennsylvania Association for College Admission Counseling, working on initiatives that promote stronger relationships between college counseling professionals and the state legislature, as well as keeping the organization engaged in initiatives that encourage inclusion and access for all Pennsylvania residents. She is also the co-founder of a local education collaborative group called the Central PA Educational Collaborative.

A long-time Harrisburg resident, Christina spends much of her free time devoted to service to her community through membership in the Harrisburg alumnae chapter of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc. and by serving as program coordinator for the Professional Women's Group of Dress for Success of South Central PA.
