

Anthony C. Stevenson, Ed.D.

Anthony C. Stevenson is the Director of Secondary Education for the Radnor Township School District, located in Wayne, PA. Mr. Stevenson brings over 20 years of experience in public and private education as a teacher and administrator. Stevenson is also a senior adjunct professor of cultural geography at Rowan University and an adjunct professor at Temple University.

As a school administrator, Stevenson has always prescribed to the distributive leadership model as a way in making school based decisions. Stevenson feels that each stakeholder group in the school must believe they have ownership in the vision of transforming the instructional practice and social climate within a school community. Stevenson's research interests include resegregation trends and diversity/equity issues related to public education.

A native of Marion, South Carolina, Stevenson is a graduate of South Carolina State University (B.A. History), Indiana University of Pennsylvania (M.S. Geography and Regional Planning), University of Pennsylvania (M.Ed. Education Leadership), and Lutheran Theological Seminary of Philadelphia (M. Divinity).

Stevenson earned his Ed.D. from the University of Pennsylvania where the focus of his research was poverty and social capital in education.