

Charity Haubrich

Charity Haubrich directs Center for Public Justice's Community Institute for Education in Pittsburgh, PA. The Institute is an initiative of the Center for Public Justice, (CPJ) a Christian organization that helps citizens, policy makers, and government to respond to the call to pursue justice for all.

The Community Institute for Education inspires and equips participants to help shape education policy towards more just outcomes for all students. Institute participants come from all walks of life and many different communities and gather together to learn and develop skills relating to education policy and reform. They then take these skills back into their local communities to help achieve justice for all families and children.

Charity holds a BS in Education and a MA in Higher Education. She has 20 years of experience investing in education in both public and private schools. Most recently she worked for Nyack College where she developed and directed the Washington Semester Program with the goal of teaching students the integral nature of faith, public policy and civic responsibility. She is a Girl Scout Leader and Vestry member at the Church of the Ascension.