Terry is the Youth Programs Manager of The Urban League of Philadelphia(ULP). ULP's youth programs focus on serving the educational, social development and career awareness needs of students. Terry's areas of expertise are Scholarships and Developing Educational Resources to Enhance Student Knowledge Capacity. He assists students in reaching educational achievements and career success by exposing them to resources and by using a curriculum that supports their individual aspirations. He is dedicated to increasing students' awareness of their educational and career options and their knowledge of financial literacy.

Prior to working at ULP, Terry was a Director at Congreso De Latino Unidos and Director of the Graduation Coach Campaign (GCC), where he developed extra curricular programming for youth in the OST programs. Students that attended the program performed at the Kimmel Center. As Director of GCC, he provided parents with resources to support and help their children reach academic milestones. Currently he manages the Project Ready program, a signature National Urban League educational model that focuses on academic success, and increased college and career awareness and social development. Terry also manages the ULP Community Scholars Program, which provided over 50 youth with more than $110,000 towards their 2016 college tuition. He also created the ULP Internship fair. This program seek to match college students with employers that offer internship opportunities.

Terry is a charter member of the Philadelphia College Prep Roundtable, an avid sports official and the parent of two children. He also serves as a Philadelphia representative for SPAC (State Parent Advisory Council). SPAC members meet in Harrisburg with DOE representative to discuss educational issues that affect parents and students. Terry has over 20 years experience in youth services, educational and community advocacy.
